6. Kindly detail the process followed to achieve the intended outcomes

a. Inception (Please detail the beginning of the project, the need, initial milestones etc. in not more than 50 words)

There is a need to empower citizens to control and monitor provision of local services. The project started with the notification for election of WCs/ASs in Feb 2010. The key milestones were establishment of the WCs/ASs, training them to perform their functions and handholding them for two years.

b. Processes involved (Please detail the processes involved, challenges faced during the course of the project in not more than 100 words)

In response to the election notification, 4,627 applications (men – 3345; women – 1282) were received for 1476 vacancies (men – 729; women -747). The election of WCs/ASs was opposed by the ward corporators. The Floor Leader of the opposition party filed a case in the Andhra Pradesh High Court to stay the process as the constitution of the ward committees would adversely affect the natural privileges of corporators. The High Court decreed in favour of continuing the election process as the WCs/ASs would increase accountability and bring administration closer to the people.

c. Stakeholders involved (Please list stakeholder(s) involved. Please do not exceed 50 words)

Registered associations like mahila mandalis, trade unions, Chambers of Commerce, medical councils; slum level federations, self-help groups, ratepayers association, resident welfare associations, registered voluntary associations, NGO, and prominent citizens; Corporators and other members of Municipal Council.

d. Financial Resources involved (Please provide details of the financial expenditure involved. Please do not exceed 50 words)

There was really no additional financial expenditure which was not available in that budget year. The budget provision for WCs was made by earmarking 20% from the budget of Hyderabad City.

e. Human Resources involved (Please provide details of the persons involved in this initiative. Please do not exceed 50 words)

All the officers and the corporators participated in the process. The prime motivator was Dr. Sameer Sharma, who has a Master's in Community Planning and a doctorate in metropolitan development from the US and Mr. Somaraju, Secretary to the Municipal Council.

f. What have been the benefits of the project post implementation? How have you been able to assess and measure the impact? (Please provide details of benefits accrued to the citizens and quantitative details of the impact where applicable. Please do not exceed 250 words)

The main positive outcome was the establishment of the WCs and ASs. After establishment of ward committees 595 WC meetings were held; 5820 resolutions passed and 1280 resolutions implemented. Additionally, 1674 AS meetings were also held. Giving oversight on daily activities, valued by people, helped to improve service delivery. This was evident from the reduction in number of adverse press reports. Ward Committees promoted dialogue and communication by creating a public realm that encouraged individuals, groups, and interest groups to engage in free and open communication. Further, the GHMC decided to prepare the Ward Development Plans (WDPs) for comprehensive and integrated development of the ward. Researchers from IIHS evaluated the performance of the WCs/ASs. Their findings show that the budget utilization was aligned to ward needs and priorities in most of the wards and confirmed that greater than 75% of the funds allocated to the WCs was utilized. Nearly, 70% of the total WC respondents stated that people approached them directly with ward problems during their visits to wards.

g. Briefly describe the key learnings you have had during the course of the project. (Please do not exceed 50 words)

The Hyderabad experiment has shown that decentralization rooted in subsidiarity has the potential to lead to effective microgovernance, develop partnerships among people, and enhance their capacity to build consensus on local issues. A novel provision that resolutions will fail if opposed by more than 20% of members of the WC ensured that 'voice' of the silent is included in decision making.

7. What is the current and future impact envisaged from the Project? (Kindly include specifics on the no. of citizens impacted, no. of institutions impacted, testimonials from the citizens/institutions impacted etc. Please do not exceed 200 words).

The WC includes various interest groups - ratepayers association, resident welfare associations, slum level federations, self-help groups, registered associations, mahila mandalis, trade unions, chambers of commerce, medical councils, registered voluntary associations, NGO, and prominent citizens. As per IIHS Survey, 55% of the respondents belonged to registered associations, mahila mandalis, trade unions, chambers of commerce and medical councils. This ensured that all sections of society were included in the decision making process of the WCs/ASs. People are interested in microgovernance institutions. The fact brought out in the IIHS study is that almost 44% of the total WC respondents spend nearly 1-9 hours every week on work related to their WC; another 23% spend 10-19 hours and 15% spend 20-29 hours.

8. How is the project expected to improve one or more aspects of public service delivery, transparency, accountability, citizen participation? (Please do not exceed 150 words).

The financial allocation to each corporator for local development was INR 1 crore. 20% of the allocation was reserved as budget for the WC and another 20% to be utilized for maintenance activities in the ward. The IIHS survey found that nearly one-third of the WC respondents knew about the fact that their budget was INR 20 lakhs and confirmed that greater than 75% was utilized. Almost two-thirds of the total WC respondents stated that the budget utilization was aligned to ward needs and priorities. The IIHS study also found that nearly 86% of the total WC respondents have stated that meeting minutes were being recorded. Almost four-fifths of the WC respondents had read the minutes of the last meeting and nearly 85% had discussed minutes of earlier meetings. This indicates increased awareness amongst the members that will lead to a greater sense of responsibility and hence better service delivery. Citizen participation also improved significantly with almost 62% respondents confirming that citizens were present in the WC meetings and 75% of the WC respondents communicated resolutions to the public by word of mouth. Nearly, 70% of the total WC respondents stated that people approached them directly with ward problems during their visits to wards.

Overall, this led to enhanced transparency and accountability.

9. Is the project scalable? If so, please explain how? What is the project's potential for systemic change? (Please do not exceed 150 words).

The Hyderabad experiment is replicable. The Constitution backs the initiative and the critical gap addressed was to make the laws and rules operational. The Hyderabad model is an example for all urban bodies in India after appropriate contextualization.

10. Do you believe the project to be sustainable? If yes, how? Please provide rationale for your belief. (Please do not exceed 150 words).

Ward Committees and Area Sabhas have come to stay because the legal backing and the operational provisions are in position. All rules have been made operational. Citizens and ward committee members have become partners in microgovernance and oversight opportunities given to citizens and civil society organizations is expected to make them champion the initiative.

I hereby declare that all the information furnished above is true and correct
